Ministers letter from Rev Phil Snelson

One of the things I quite often find that people struggle with is forgiveness.

When I responded to God's call to ministry I was sent to ministers' training college for two years and my family came with me. We were blessed with a large family flat on campus and that was where we lived – even across the summer holidays. However in the summer between the two years, the college decided to bring in a large number of French exchange students to stay in all the vacant rooms – far more students than was safe or manageable. As a result all sorts of things happened that made life very difficult and unhappy for us across that summer.

I became angry at the college authorities for all the hurt they had caused my family – rightly so I thought. I wrote letters to the Principal and to the Pastoral Committee. Some people, even a tutor or two, actually encouraged me in my “righteous anger” and my desire for justice, but as the weeks went by I found I was growing more angry and it was beginning to “eat me up”.

The following Easter we went to a Christian festival called Easter People. One morning the message was about forgiving and I knew God was speaking to me, but my problem was that I just didn't feel I could forgive. I decided to talk with one of the ministry team afterwards who listened as I told him some of my story and why I didn't feel that I could forgive. Then he simply said, “Phil, you have to choose to forgive. The feelings will follow.” I didn't like his answer much, but I sort of knew he was right and he helped me through wilfully choosing to forgive before God even though I didn't feel like it.

To be honest I didn't feel much different afterwards or for the rest of the day, but the next morning I felt so relieved like a great weight had lifted from me emotionally. It had been a struggle but I had chosen to forgive, let go, giving it to God and the healing had begun.

As I talk with others I often find that they have not really thought through or understood how forgiveness works.

Forgiveness is NOT forgetting or trying to pretend it doesn't matter. People who want to forget all that was done to them will find they cannot do it. Forgiveness is not something we wait to do when we feel we can, or when we

A Blessing .... Some of you will have met Amina who came to our Harvest Service the other week. Until John and I went to Luton Airport on 9th October we had never met or spoken to Amina. She had just emailed the Circuit Office asking if anyone would be happy for her to stay while she came to experience nursing at Milton Keynes Hospital for two weeks. As no-one else had offered we decided to invite her. We did know that she was a member of the United Methodist Church of Switzerland, so at least we had that in common.

Our time with her has indeed been a blessing to us and we feel that we have gained a 'daughter' and she is calling us her 'English parents'. We certainly hope to see her again soon.

On a card she left us she has put the following blessing which we would like to share with you:

May your life on this earth be a happy one.

May the sky be blue and

May the sun be warm.

May each storm that comes your way

Clear the air for a brighter day.

May the saints and the Saviour watch over you.

Ann & John

finish feeling angry at someone. If you wait to forget, or to "feel forgiving" you may well never get there. Nor is it that we wait for the other person to ask for our forgiveness. Don't put off forgiving those who have hurt you, hoping the pain will one day go away.

Forgiveness is choosing not to hold someone's wrongs against him or her any more. Once you choose to forgive someone, then Jesus can come and begin to heal you of your hurts. The healing cannot begin until you first forgive.

"But you don't know how much this person hurt me!" you say. You're probably right. I don't, but Jesus does, and He still tells us to forgive – it is so important that it is the only thing Jesus comments on after teaching the Lord's Prayer (Matthew 6:14-15).

It is common for bitter people to bring up past issues with those who have hurt them. They want them to feel bad. But don't you see?! We must let go of the past and choose to reject any thought of revenge. Until you let go of your anger and hatred, what's actually happening is that you are the one still hurting. We have to live with the consequences of what others have done anyway whether we like it or not, so the choice we have to make is whether we will do so in the bondage of bitterness or in the freedom of forgiveness. You can stop the pain, but there is only one way to do it — forgive.

We have to trust - and we can - that God will deal with the person justly and fairly, something we simply cannot do ourselves (Romans 12:19-20).

This doesn't mean we continue to turn a blind eye to the sins of others in the future. God does not tolerate sin and neither should we. We don't have to allow ourselves to be continually abused by others. We can take a stand against sin while continuing to exercise grace and forgiveness toward those who hurt us. If you need help setting wise limits and boundaries to protect yourself from further abuse, talk to a trusted friend, counsellor, or minister.

Forgiving is vital to our emotional, spiritual and physical health. Forgive one another, just as God through Christ has forgiven you. (Ephesians 4:32)

Yours in Christ,

Phil
